“ Uncle Stanley always reminded me of the happy times my brother and I had out in the country, and the generations of family and friends that lined the road that he and my late mom grew up on. Although I live far from home, my roots are in southern Illinois and Uncle Stanley and our family and friends there will always be a part of me. He was a good man and he also could make you laugh. He, however, failed to teach me how to shoot a BB gun when I was about five. The world is safer because of it. Thankful that he's finally at peace and out of pain. All my love to my cousins.
