“ Oh, sweet Uncle Richard... my heart has been so heavy ever since we last spoke. You were more than just my favorite uncle, you were like a big brother, as you were only four years older than me. The memories that stand out most are us as children. Me, the bratty niece that always wanted you to carry me on your back, and you, the ever pleasing uncle who would do it just to make me happy. I remember I would never leave you alone with your little crush from the store across the street (the owner's daughter) and you would get so annoyed with me but never had the heart to shoo me away. I remember making fun of you because you would rock side-to-side to fall asleep. I remember the sweat bubbles that would form on your nose, I remember how you used to bite the front of your t-shirts until they lost their shape (that would make mom so mad - LOL) but what I most remember is how you said my name "Luzma". My adult memories with you were far and few between, unfortunately. But they are so dear to me. Like the time my boyfriend went to Illinois with me from Texas and his cowboy hat looked better on you than him, so we gave it to you. You were so reluctant to take it but we insisted and all you said for the next hour was "are you sure" and "thank you, Luzma". I remember when I video called you two-shots deep into tequila and had you laughing it up at my ridiculous (but true) stories. Thank you for everything, Uncle Richard. Thank you for raising my brother's children. Thank you for your unwavering patience. Thank you for never being judgemental. Thank you for your big ol' heart of gold. Thank you for having existed. I love you with all me being and I pray to see you again some day... on the other, better side.

“ I remember in late November one year me and Richard went and helped his dad cut wood all day and when we got done, we went and jumped in a lake to cool off and froze our butt off and had to go get a hot shower. By Robbie in Florida
